THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER. O ! say, can you see, by the dawn's early light, What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming;

Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight, O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming? And the rockets' red glare, the bombs bursting

Just then I saw Wm. II. Seward and wife, his son and his wife, come into a side door, and devotedly drop their heads. This cooled me down a little: and while i and his wife, come into a side turned to see who so many else were turning to see, lo, and behold! there was General Scott! I had never seen him. No one told me it was he. But I knew it was him, as I once knew Henry Clay in the same kind of an appearing to my vision in a church. "There," said I, "that's Henry Clay, I know," and so I said this time to myself, for I would not speak to my unconscionable neighbor, "that's Winfield Scott." Oh. oh. what a man! Did you ever see such a frame, such a port, such a lion's head on a man; such an eye of an old lion in it. flashing, undimmed; such greatness, conscious of all but himself. He came to the very next pew but one, in front of me, and kneeled forward in prayer.

Then he hid his face for several moments in a plain black hat, then rising up, put his hat and gloves inside a colored stand, which he had fixed evidently for himself. The pew is about as large as two of those next to it, and yet was none too commodious for such an immense man. His dress was a plain blue black frock, which he kept butoned with one button; his pairts the same cloth; his vest, black cloth; his collar, the old-fashioned stand up, which was held tight to his half-shorn, full cheeks by a military stock. He found his place readily, and read audibly, making the responses, and rising at every singing and doxology. There were two or three times when he fell back at the first effort to rise. He had no glasses and seemed to need none, even when he must have read every word as for instance in the psalter. But I could see that his handsome hand trembled a little, showing that Solomon's beautiful imagery is, true of all the aged, where he says, "the keepers of the house do tremble. sat and looked at that hand, and as it turned the leaves to every lesson, I said to myself, what a history has that hand! how it has grasped the reins of the war-horse: ow it has brandished the sword; how it has pointed to action and to victory on Lundy's Lane and Mexico; how it has now, for weeks and months, been mapping out plan of the campaign, which is every and night becoming a victorious his-Let none blame my thoughts, for I not think I worshipped any the less dewontly, but all the more for having him be-

A Union Ticket. For some time back our Republican friends have been extremely anxious that a naixed ticket—to be made up of equal numbers of Black Republicans and Democrats should be formed for support this Fall. It would be a very convenient arrangement by which to escape the load of infamy which now rests upon their shoulders. The iniquities of the last Legislature, and the swindling of their Governor, are heavy burdens to carry, and a union ticket would be a very sonven-be diverted from its purpose by side issues, and yet slavery forms a disturbing element in the conflict that constantly thrusts itself into the foreground. So far, the subject has been disposed of upon principles of expediency: but it may soon assume such magnitude as to require that it should be treated upon established and permanent principles. In his celebrated proclamation, summoning the nation to arms for defence of the Government and there-possession of its captured possessions, the President declared that this purpose smould be attained with as little damage to private property as pos-sible. This was eminebtly proper, as it was desirable to impress the Southern peo-ple with the conviction that the only purpose of the Government was to maintain its property and power, and not to disturb established relations—that, in truth, war was not commenced for conquest or the destruction of private rights and political relations, but for a specific purpose upon which depended the very existence and perpetuity of government. This was clearly compre-hended by the North. It was desirable that it should be understood with equal clearness by the Union men of the South, so that they would be free to co-operate with the Govern ment without incurring any danger of the loss of private property or the destruction

of constitutional guarantees.
It is manifest that upon the proper understanding of the purposes of the North by the people of the South, depends the suc-cess of the efforts new making for the res-toration of the Union. We have a greater task before us than the subjugation of the of their servile population, and inviting them to commence the work of indiscrimi-nate slaughter. But beside being inhuman and diabolical, this would defeat the pur poses of the Northern people. It would gain for us the undying hatred of the South, and render the restoration of confidence impossible. The Union could never be recatablished by such means. It would be the Union of conquerors with conquereda despotism established over an unwilling people-a radical revolution in our form of government that would eventually recoil upon the North, and work consequences more dreadful than separation.

If therefore, we wish to turn the hearts of the Union men of the South permanently against the government to which they are now looking for rescue from a baneful tyso would be to adopt the suggestion of a contemporary—"to proclaim liberty to these slaves belonging to rebel masters." The execution of such an edict would necessarily be committed to the slaves themselves, who would not stop to inquire whether their masters were rebels or loyal Union men; nor could the army undertake to determine this point. The proclamation would in effectamount to the entire abolition of slavery. which would be a palpable usurpation of power on the part of the Government.—
Union men would lose all confidence in a Government that confiscated their property in utter defiance of the Constitution, and the hope of restoration through their agency be forever extinguished.

General Butler now treats slaves belonging to rebel masters as contraband of war-but it is because they are the property of O, no! "no party now," say our Republish rebels. He has already returned fugitives can adversaries. "There is no longer any to loyal masters, and would no doubt do so Whig.Republican, or Democratic party now," again. Indeed, he offered to return these slaves, if their masters would take the oath to support the laws, and he only retains them because they refused to comply with the condition. We are not prepared to indicate what dis-position should be made of fugitives when hey flock in great numbers to our camps. We appreciate the embarassments that surround the subject. But one thing is clear -our army cannot be diverted from the great purpose of putting down rebellion, -

Clove Anodyne

OOTHACHE DROPS.—Complain no more of Aching Teeth.—These Drops have been extensively used by thousands whose experience has proved that the Anodyne will give immediate and permanent relief after the failure of every other remedy. It is pleasant to the taste and smell, and a few applications will entirely remove the pain and soreness from a de cased tooth, so that it may be filled and ren-dered as useful as ever. When the pain proderest as userius as ever. When the pain proceeds from the face, or from the game around a tooth apparently sound, this Anodyne will give speedy relief by rubbing a few drops on the part affected. It has only to become generally known to be as highly appreciated by the public as it is by dentists. Read the following letter from one of the most distinguished practical dentists in the city Clove Anodyne with much success for the re-liet of the Toothache, and as I constantly recommend it to my patients, I deem it but just to inform you of the high opinion I have of it over other remedies. Lam yours, very, respectfully;

How Gen. Scott Looked in Church. The Chicago Tribune has a lively letter from Washington, in which the writer thus tells us how Gen. Scott looked at church a few Sundays ago: Well, I have seen the great man. How many times I have feared I should die, or he would, before the general, of all generals the greatest, should be seen. But many an incidental good comes from going regularly to church; if you don't believe it, reader, try it. Yesterday I went to Rev. Dr. Payne's, because I liked his remarks over the dead body of Ellsworth. It was a charming day, readers but piled up on top. Nothing or curred to mar my quiet, as I walked in the shade of the grand old trees in front of the Nor. President's, in the midst of which the horse adjoining county by a gentleman who was of Gen. Jackson seems intent on throwing separated from his wife, for custody of their him off; but the old Andrew is enough for child. The case came up for trial some time his tantrums, as he was for John C. Calhome's. One tree I came to made me feel sad, both for the sake of the tree, which had been peeled, and because there fell Key by the hand of Sickles. Just as I was there, that they should have the child week about, the swiftest negro boy I have yet seen came and to carry out the order of the court, the riding a borse, as if the enemy were attack- child should be taken to church every Suning our troops and he were riding to the President's to tell the tale; and it was all the decision is according to law or not we the more exciting, because three cannon reports were heard a little before. But I am getting to church slowly. * *

Just then I saw Wm. H. Seward and wife, his son and his wife, come into a side door, and devotedly drop their heads,-This cooled me down a little: and while I turned to see who so many else were turning to see, lo, and behold! there was General Scott! I had never seen kim. No one told me it was he. But I knew it was him, as I once knew Henry Clay in the same kind of an appearing to my vision in a church. "There," said I, "that's Henry Clay, I know," and so I said this time to myself, for I would not speak to my unconscionable neighbor, "that's Winfield Scott." Oh, oh, what a man! Did you ever see ruch a frame, such a port, such a lion's head on a man; such an eye of an old lion in it, flashing, undimmed; such greatness, conscious of all but himself. He came to the very next pew but one, in front of me, and kneeled forward in prayer. Then he hid his face for several moments in a plain black hat, then rising up, put his hat and gloves inside a colored stand, which he had fixed evidently for himself. The pew is about as large as two of those next to it, and yet was none too commodious for such an immense man. His dress was a plain blue black frock, which he kept buttoned with one button; his pants were of the same cloth; his vest, black cloth; his collar, the old-fashioned stand up, which was held tight to his half-shorn, full cheeks by a military stock. He found his place readily, and read audibly, making the responses, and rising at every singing and doxology. There were two or three times when he fell back at the first effort to rise, He had no glasses and scemed to need none. even when he must have read every word as for instance in the psalter. But I could see that his handsome hand trembled a little, showing that Solomon's beautiful imagery is true of all the aged, where he says, "the keepers of the house do tremble." I sat and looked at that hand, and as it turned the leaves to every lesson, I said to myself, what a history has that hand! how t has grasped the reins of the war-horse; how it has brandished the sword; how it has pointed to action and to victory on Lundy's Lane and Mexico; how it has now, for weeks and months, been mapping out plan of the campaign, which is every and night becoming a victorious his-Let none blame my thoughts, for I not think I worshipped any the less deroatly, but all the more for having him be-

Death from Hydrophobia. - A most distressing death from this terrible disease occurred in Saugus, Mass., on Sunday. Julia Fitz-patrick, aged 10 years, daughter of Mr. John Fitzpatrick, was slightly bitten by a dog about six weeks ago. The animal was supposed to be mad, and was killed. As there was only a trifling mark upon the child's lip, it was believed that it might have been caused by the dog running against her, thus making her bite her own lip. Nothing further was heard of the matter until last Saturday, when she was suddenly taken ill, and so rapidly was the disand it would have been wicked to stay in ease developed, and after intense suffering, under any circumstances for the purpose doors to a man of taste, who loves sunshine in which, during her spasms, she imitated sweetly tempered; trees in leaf and bloom; the bark and howl of a dog, she died on ladies in full bloom too, with stacks of roses Sunday noon. Good Advice .-- If the poorhouse has any terror for you never buy what you don't need. Before you pay three cents for a jews-harp, see if you can't make just as pleasant a nois by whistling, for such nature furnishes the machinery. And before you pay seven dollars for a figured vest, young man, find out whether your lady love would not be just the remarkable appearance of the box and as glad to see you in a plain one that cost after a careful inspection of the same, at just half the money. If she would'nt let her a prudent distance, he came to the conclusions to the conclusion of the same, at clothes.

Important to Trachers .- It is officially announced by the head of the School Department that "County Superintendents are instructed to grant no certificates after the first Monday in June, 1861, without an examination into the theory as well as the practice of teaching; and to mark the proficiency in both, in the certificate, according to the same scale (from one to five) with the other branches." Proficiency in the theory is to be tested by examination; and skill in the practice by observation in the school room.

Not Necessary.—A man whom Dr. Johnson noe reproved for following a useless and demoralizing business, said: "You know, doctor, that I must live."

The brave old hater of everything mean and hateful coolly replied that he did not

"see the least necessity for that." "A fellow out west being asked whether the liquor he was drinking was a

The most perplexing question connected with the Southern rebellion is how to deal with slavery. It is conceded on all sides that the war is not against slavery, but for suppression of rebellion. The army cannot be diverted from its purpose by side issues, and yet slavery forms a disturbing element in the conflict that constantly thrusts itself into the foreground. So far, the subject has been disposed of upon principles of expediency; but it may soon assume such magni-tude as to require that it should be treated upon established and permanent principles.

In his celebrated proclamation, summon-as little damage to private property as possible. This was eminently proper, as it was desirable to impress the Southern peo-ple with the conviction that the only purnose of the Government was to maintain its property and power, and not to disturb es-tablished relations—that, in truth, war was not commenced for conquest or the destruction of private rights and political relations. but for a specific purpose upon which de-pended the very existence and perpetuity of government. This was clearly comprehended by the North. It was desirable that it should be understood with equal clearness by the Union men of the South, so that they would be free to co-operate with the Govern ment without incurring any danger of the standing of the purposes of the North by the people of the South, depends the suc-cess of the efforts now making for the restoration of the Union. We have a greater task before us than the subjugation of the South—to gain their good will, and induce them to return to the Union. No man questions the power of the North to conquer the Southern States by beating their armies in the field, by laying waste their country and by putting arms in the hands of their servile population, and inviting them to commence the work of indiscriminate slaughter. But beside being inhuman and diabolical, this would defeat the purpo-es of the Northern people. It would gain for us the undying hatred of the South, and render the restoration of confidence impossible. The Union could never be reestablished by such means. It would be the Union of conquerors with conquereddespotism established over an unwilling people—a radical revolution in our form of government that would eventually recoil upon the North, and work consequences the Union men of the South permanently against the government to which they are now looking for rescue from a baneful tyranny, the most expeditious way of doing so would be to adopt the suggestion of a centemporary—"to proclaim liberty to those slaves belonging to rebel masters." The execution of such an edict would necessarily be committed to the slaves themselves. who would not stop to inquire whether their masters were rebels or loyal Union men; nor could the army undertake to determine this point. The proclamation would in effect amount to the entire abelition of slavery, which would be a palpable usurpation of power on the part of the Government .-Union men would lose all confidence in a Government that confiscated their property in utter defiance of the Constitution and the hope of restoration through their agency be forever extinguished.

General Butler now treats slaves belonging to rebel masters as contraband of war -but it is because they are the property of rebels. He has already returned fugitives "There is no longer any to loyal masters, and would no doubt do so again. Indeed, he offered to return theso slaves, if their masters would take the oath them because they refused to comply with

After crossing the narrow Just beyond the bridge the Confederates planted their battery, consisting of at least one twelve-pound rifle cannon and two field pieces. The line of intrenchments then followed the right side of the read, with a ditch only between them.

The position was excellently chosen—the stream and morass on the left of the road widening so as to render futile any attempt to out-flank the Confederates on that side. The formation of the ground on the right made a flank movement very circuitous. -The first intimation of the battery was a sharp discharge of artillery upon the Zouaves who twice attempted to carry the work, but were unable to pass the stream, and had to fall back among the trees. The other regiments came up in the order given in my first dispatch, but for want of a good commander fell into confusion. LETTERS FROM CAMP.

CAMP CHAMBERS, Chambersburg, } Friday, June 7, 1861.

FRIEND STARLE :-- Camp McClure was thrown into excitement this morning, in consequence of an order from headquarters to "forward march." Packing being done very quickly, they moved in the direction of Hagerstown. The Camp consisted of three regiments of infantry and 400 cavalry, in connection with the Fort Sumter infantry, with baggage wagons, each company having one four-horse wagon; the whole forming a line of at least two miles, requiring two hours to pass a given point. From six to eight miles constitutes an ordinary day's march, and ten to twelve miles a forced march. A sight like this will probably never again be witnessed in this county,---Whilst these regiments are moving others We understand that the Second are arriving and filling their places in camp.
